

Drew Golfin is a Managing Director in KPMG's Risk Analytics practice, resident in Hartford, CT. Drew has worked in property and casualty consulting and at a major national carrier. His experience includes diverse actuarial consulting assignments for reinsurance and insurance companies as well as non-insurance companies. Drew's company experience includes specialty lines, segment Chief Actuary roles, research & development, claim actuarial, and enterprise risk management (ERM). Prior to his career in the insurance industry, Drew was a college mathematics professor. He received a B.A. in Mathematics from Dartmouth College, a PhD in Mathematics from the University of Massachusetts, and is a Fellow of the Casualty Actuarial Society.

George M. Levine is a Director in KPMG's Risk Analytics practice, resident in the Hartford, Connecticut. George currently serves as the appointed actuary for captive insurance companies and property/casualty insurance companies. In a prior position for a large self-insurer, George was involved in the design of actuarial reports for a Fortune 50 Company. He received a B.S. in Economics from the University of Pennsylvania, an MBA from University of Connecticut, and is a Fellow of the Casualty Actuarial Society.